Julio A. Chirinos, MD, PhD is a Professor of Medicine, Co-Director of the Clinical Research T32 Training Program in Cardiovascular Biology and Medicine, and Adjunct Faculty at the Center for Magnetic Resonance and Optical Imaging at the University of Pennsylvania Perelman School of Medicine. He is the current President of the North American Artery Society. He is also an adjunct Faculty member at the University of Ghent in Belgium. He is a specialist in Internal Medicine and Cardiology, with a sub-specialty in cardiac imaging (echocardiography and cardiac magnetic resonance imaging). He directs an NIH-funded research program focused on the role of arterial stiffness and pulsatile hemodynamics in cardiovascular disease and mechanisms of human heart failure with preserved ejection fraction (HFpEF). He co-leads a Global Heart Failure biomarker consortium, an industry-academic collaboration investigating proteomics and genomics in heart failure. He is the University of Pennsylvania Principal Investigator and a Steering Committee member of Heart Share, a multicenter research consortium funded by the NHLBI aimed at discerning mechanisms of disease in human HFpEF. Dr. Chirinos has published >250 papers in high-impact journals, including the New England Journal of Medicine, New England Journal of Medicine Evidence, The Lancet, The Lancet Respiratory Medicine, Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), Circulation, Hypertension and Journal of the American College of Cardiology (JACC). He has received awards or honorary fellowships from the American Heart Association, the Inter-American Society of Cardiology, the American Society of Hypertension, the European Society of Cardiology and the Korean Society of Cardiology. He has served as associate Editor or Editorial Board member in multiple journals including Circulation Heart Failure, Journal of Clinical Hypertension, Journal of the American College of Cardiology-Cardiovascular Imaging, American Journal of Hypertension, Pulse, Journal of Geriatric Cardiology, and Journal of the American Heart Association. He is the editor of the 2-volume textbook "Arterial Stiffness and Pulsatile Hemodynamics in Health and Disease". He has participated in various clinical expert committees for the American Heart Association, American Society of Echocardiography, European Society of Cardiology, American Society of Hypertension and European Association of Cardiovascular Imaging, and has been a speaker in >150 scientific sessions in national or international meetings.
